

Keystone × WeBring

Partnership Brief · Bangladesh → Korea

Who we are

Keystone Education sends students from Bangladesh to Korea. Our founder lived in Korea for 9 years, and we operate from outside Dhaka — in Gazipur, Narsingdi, and Mymensingh — closer to the students others overlook.

We focus on the single thing every family here fears most: visa security.

What we bring you — a visa-secured, low-desertion pipeline

The students we would introduce to WeBring have already cleared the highest-risk hurdle before they ever land in Korea, because our model is built around it:

- Regional-visa-capable universities only — we steer students to programs with the strongest visa-success profile.
- Pre-submission document audit — every application file is machine-checked to zero defects before it is submitted, so it clears on the first pass.
- Nine years of on-the-ground Korea experience behind every case.

The result is exactly the profile your settlement services are designed for: students who arrive visa-secured and unlikely to drop out.

Where we see the fit

We handle admissions end-to-end ourselves, so the synergy is not the application side — it is your on-the-ground settlement infrastructure in Korea: housing, insurance, airport pickup, and part-time work and employment. That is the piece we genuinely cannot build from Bangladesh, and it is what lets us promise families a true "safe landing."

Two non-overlapping halves: our visa-secured funnel, your post-arrival safety net.

To make our first call concrete, three questions

1. Commercial model — so we can design something fair on both sides, is WeBring structured as a per-student settlement fee, a university-side arrangement, a student subscription, or a revenue share?
2. Unique post-arrival value — what does your side deliver after the student lands that could not be replicated remotely, and how does it lower desertion risk?
3. Country partnership — with India and Vietnam already underway, what do you look for in a Bangladesh channel partner?

We think our two halves fit together unusually well. Looking forward to the conversation.
